

A philosophical doctrine on science and knowledge that postulates that there is no objective or absolute social reality, but only various ways of interpreting that reality.

Syn.: social constructionism