

An economic evaluation consisting of comparing various options, in which the cost components and the various outcomes of a disease or intervention are calculated and presented separately.