

An observational study in which the investigators choose a group of subjects in a given population and measure the simultaneous presence or absence of the risk factor and the outcome of interest.

Note: The selection of the group of subjects is sometimes done through random sampling.

Syn.: prevalence study

Ant.: longitudinal study