

The study of the distribution and determinants of health-related states or events in specified populations.