

All costs resulting from the consumption of additional resources following a given intervention (because it increases life expectancy, for example).