

All costs attributed to the value of economic production lost due to disease, a disabling injury or premature death.*

- Not to be confused with indirect costs in accounting, where the term refers to overhead costs.

Note: Drummond and his collaborators do not support the use of this concept.