

A period, generally one year, at the end of which an entity proceeds with the closing of its accounts and the establishment of its annual financial statements.