

A chi-square test for taking categorical confounding variables into account when doing a weighted sum of the associations in each of the categories, called strata.

Note: In meta-analyses, the strata are the various studies included.