

The degree to which a patient or group is able to obtain care or services, taking into account the health system's financial and organizational constraints.