A tool for assisting clinical decision making that can be used to determine the probability of response to a treatment or to propose a diagnostic or therapeutic course of action on the basis of variables obtained from the patient's history, physical exam or test results.