

In a randomized controlled trial, the application of additional diagnostic or therapeutic procedures to the members of the experimental group or the control group, or both.

Alternate spelling: co-intervention