

The determination of the nature of a disease by means of its signs and symptoms and the results of investigations.

Note: The establishment of a diagnosis also means ruling out other diseases and causal factors for the clinical manifestations.