

A mathematical process used to bring future costs and benefits to their present value.

Note: These adjustments imply that future costs and benefits have less value than the same costs and benefits in the present.