

The benefit of using a technology, programme or intervention to treat a particular problem under ideal conditions—for example, in the context of research in a laboratory or a rigorous protocol for a randomized clinical trial.