

The level of health of a person, group or population, as assessed by the person himself/herself or through objective measures.