

A study in which the data for the control group are collected at a time period prior to that for the intervention group.

Note 1: Historical control studies are prone to selection bias.