

A measure of central tendency corresponding to the value below which 50% of the observations are found.

Note: The median is the midpoint of observations ranked in ascending order. It can provide a better estimate of the mean when extreme values cause asymmetry in the distribution of the observations.