A method of intervention allocation for obtaining study groups that are very similar for several variables.

Note: This method can be used with or without a randomization component.

Alternate spelling: minimisation.