

The classification of a person or a characteristic as being in a category other than that to which it should have been assigned, leading to a measurement bias.