

A clinical trial in which a single subject is the total population for the study.

Note: Random allocation may be used to determine the order in which the subject will receive the experimental intervention and the control intervention.