

The process by which manuscripts submitted to journals or other scientific publications in the health or biomedical field are evaluated by experts in the appropriate field to determine if they are of adequate quality for publication.