

The inclination to use a technology that has potential for some benefit, however marginal or unsubstantiated, based on an abiding fascination with technology, the expectation that new is better, and financial and other professional incentives.