

An extension of least squares regression used when there is heterogeneity in the variances or dependence between the observations.

Note: This method is often used in meta-regression, and the weights then correspond to the precision of each study's estimate of effect.